PARKROYAL on Pickering, Singapore's first hotel-in-a-garden hotel, by award-winning architectural firm WOHA, is a 367-room hotel on the edge of Singapore's Central Business District, which features large balconies and terraces covered in 15,000 square metres of tropical plants and incorporates energy-saving features throughout the property. The entire building is living and breathing and exemplifies a new level of breathing architecture supporting its own ecosystem.

RECLAIMED MARBLE STONE COMPOSITE – BATHTUBS, BASINS, VANITIES & SHOWER BASES

The hotel rooms themselves are more simple in design than the exterior however the layout of each one is unique and designed in relation to the garden outside. Only two rooms per floor look across the back of the building; the remainder enjoy views of the hotel's own gardens or of the city to the north-west and south-east. The luxury bathrooms also have an outlook, positioned behind the facade or, for the lower grades, stealing glimpses across the room via wide sliding dividers. apaiser's customisation and design flexibility enabled the designer to create unique shapes and forms that differentiate each of the 367 contemporary bathrooms.
