Set in stone

Open-plan yet private, this master
suite is an escape from everyday life

UNDOUBTEDLY THE FOCAL POINT,
THE LUXURIOUSLY LARGE BATH SETS
THE STYLE OF THE ROOM.

Previously a very small bedroom, this bathroom renovation has transformed a cramped and unused space into a lavish retreat.

The client's brief was for an adult area zoned for different activities – sleeping, dressing and bathing. "They wanted a retreat to escape into – one of relaxation and peace to recline in the gorgeous Apaiser stone bath," said the bathroom designer.

The clients specifically didn't want a mundane white bath. They chose the Apaiser stone tub for its organic, inviting form. To achieve the client's request for an open yet private design, large Shoji screen doors have been chosen, connecting the ensuite to the main bedroom.

The clever design even allows one to recline and relax in the bath, with an unobstructed view of the TV in the bedroom. Frameless glass showerscreens enclose the shower seamlessly, providing an open-plan feeling. The choice of glass panels and large-format tiles minimises cleaning requirements in the room.

Another standout feature is the Ellesse stone vanity, its clean lines giving contrast and balance to the rounded tub. Also by Apaiser, the Ellesse vanity and Sentosa basin give the room a modern-classic aesthetic. The mixed material palette of dark wood, Apaiser's reclaimed marble stone bathware, neutral tiles, and pearl paint come together for a room that exudes natural elegance. ∎

Bath Apaiser Reflection bath in composite stone made from recycled marble in 'Nimbus'
Basin Apaiser Sentosa basin in composite stone made from recycled marble in 'Cotton'
Vanity Apaiser Ellesse vanity
Shower Frameless glass screen, showerhead by Rogerseller

Toilet Rogerseller
Doors Shoji timber custom-made screen doors from Melbourne Plantation Shutters
Heating Hydronic heating
Lighting Recessed ceiling lights
Tiling Grey matte wall tiles by Rogerseller, marble floor tiles 600mm × 600mm
Paint Porter's Paints pearlescent